Beyond De-escalation:
Applied Workshop

Full-Day Training

We've attended professional development sessions filled with great ideas, only to wonder how to apply them. Knowing what to do during a behavior crisis and actually doing it when emotions run high are two different things!

When a student escalates, there isn't always time to recall everything we've learned. We need opportunities to practice responses, navigate challenging situations, and build confidence through preparation.

In Beyond De-escalation: Applied Workshop, we'll roll up our sleeves and put those strategies to work! Through realistic scenarios, guided practice, and collaborative planning, educators will strengthen de-escalation skills, refine crisis response procedures, and practice teaching accountability. You'll leave with practical experience and a stronger plan for responding as a team during challenging situations.

What You'll Learn

In this interactive, hands-on workshop, we'll practice how to:

- Recognize the stages of a developing behavior crisis and identify early warning signs.
- Build coordinated crisis response teams with clearly defined roles and responsibilities.
- Identify when students are ready for accountability following a behavior crisis.
- Use meaningful consequences to teach responsibility and encourage better choices.
- Guide students back to learning through reflection, skill-building, and relationship restoration.

Ready to Put Your De-escalation Skills into Action?

Getting students through a crisis is important, but what happens next matters just as much! Let's bring practical, classroom-tested training to your school or district and help your team respond to crises with confidence.
